

Globus Medical Announces Appointment of Orthopedic Trauma Division's Vice President of Sales

May 21, 2018

AUDUBON, Pa., May 21, 2018 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Globus Medical, Inc. (NYSE:GMED), a leading musculoskeletal solutions company, today announced the appointment of Daniel Gregoris to Vice President of Sales for the company's emerging Orthopedic Trauma division. Gregoris will be responsible for leading the growth and expansion of Globus Medical's direct Trauma sales force and the development and execution of all domestic sales strategies within the Trauma business unit.

"Dan shares the company's values and passion for continuous product innovation and exceptional customer responsiveness," said Chief Executive Officer Dave Demski. "His extensive experience in sales management, expertise in the orthopedic trauma space, and proven track record of building dynamic and highly successful sales teams make him an excellent choice to lead our trauma sales force as they enter this new market."

Prior to joining Globus Medical, Gregoris served as Area Vice President of Sales for DePuy Synthes Trauma, a subsidiary of Johnson and Johnson, and brings over 20 years of combined sales and sales management experience in the orthopedic trauma market.

"I'm so excited to lead the trauma sales efforts for a company with a strong history in quality products and service that truly help surgeons and healthcare systems advance patient care," Gregoris said. "I am passionate about medical devices and this is where I have spent my entire career. I look forward to leveraging my more than two decades of sales experience and relationships with the Globus commitment to enter and advance orthopedic trauma."
